

Olera Provider Agreement

This agreement explains how it works to bring on an Olera student caregiver, and what you agree to. It is written for you, the provider — a licensed or registered home care agency. You are free to browse and interview students at no cost; you pay only when you hire.

What this is

Olera recruits and vets local pre-health students — pre-nursing, pre-medical, and similar — who want real caregiving experience, and matches them to your agency as caregivers. You review candidates, interview the ones you like, and hire the ones who fit. When you hire a student, you are their employer. Olera makes the match and verifies the student; Olera is not the employer and is not a staffing agency.

How it works, step by step

- 1. You join. You confirm you are a licensed or registered home care agency. Creating an account is free.
- 2. You review and interview candidates. You browse vetted student caregivers and interview the ones you are interested in. There is no cost to browse, interview, or connect.
- 3. You hire, and the fee applies. When you hire a student, you pay Olera a one-time $200 for that placement, invoiced after the hire. If the student works fewer than 15 hours, we refund it in full. The first 15 hours cover our onboarding cost plus a fair placement fee, so you risk nothing if it does not work out.
- 4. You are the employer. The student works for you. You set the schedule, pay them through your payroll, and supervise the work. You also handle background checks, insurance, and the employment laws that apply to you. Olera does not run your payroll or carry your insurance.
- 5. You support the student's record. Your honest reviews help the student build a record they can use. If a student asks and you feel they earned it, you may write a recommendation letter or agree to be a reference — Olera gives you a short summary of their work and a template to make it easy. That is always your choice.

If it works out, you are welcome to keep the student on for the long term, and to keep hiring through Olera.

Who is responsible for what

- You (the agency): employ the student, set the schedule and pay, supervise the work, and handle hiring and compliance.
- The student: does the care, works professionally, and keeps their profile current.
- Olera: recruits, vets, and matches students, verifies them, and supports the program.

Insurance and liability

Because the student is your employee, all insurance, liability, and legal duties are yours. Olera carries none.

What Olera does, and does not do

Olera does: recruit, vet, and match students, verify them, and support the program.

Olera does not: employ the student, pay the student (you do), act as an insurer or staffing agency, or promise any outcome.
