

Olera Student Caregiver Internship — Intern Agreement

You want a career in health care. To get there, you need real hours caring for patients. This internship helps you get those hours, prove they happened, and use them on your applications. Do good work, and we will help you show it.

Dr. Logan DuBose, MD

This is the agreement between you (the intern) and Olera. It explains how the internship works and what you agree to. If you have a question about the internship, the answer is here.

- 1. Who can join. You can join if you are in school now, or you finished school recently and plan to apply to a professional school. You must need patient-care hours. That is all.
- 2. The fee. You pay $200 one time. You pay it only after a host offers you a spot and you accept. You never pay again. It covers you until you finish, no matter how many hosts or terms it takes.
- 3. Before you start. First, finish our short training. Fill out your profile. Upload any documents we ask for. Do this before your first shift.
- 4. Your host is your boss. A host is the family or agency you work for. Your host sets your schedule, pays you, and supervises you. Olera is not your boss and does not pay you. Agencies pay you through their payroll. Families pay you directly, and Olera may help send the payment.
- 5. How your hours count. After each shift, you fill out a short report card. Your host checks it. At the end, Olera adds up your checked hours. Your checked hours stay yours, even if you stop working with a host.
- 6. What you agree to do. Show up on time. Tell your host early if your plans change. Only do tasks you were trained for. Keep private things private. Keep your profile up to date so hosts know when you are free.
- 7. What you get. You get hosts to work with, checked patient-care hours, reviews, references, and a letter of recommendation if a host feels you earned it. You also get help with your resume, your personal statement, and a practice interview.
- 8. Your certificate. When you reach 120 checked hours and finish your training, Olera gives you a certificate. It shows what you did. You can use it on your applications.
- 9. What Olera does and does not do. Olera connects you to hosts, keeps your records, and gives you the certificate. Olera is not your employer or your insurer. Olera does not promise you a job, pay, hours, or a school acceptance.
- 10. After you finish. You can keep using Olera to work with families and agencies for as long as you want. Your application help stays free.
- 11. Signing. You sign by clicking accept when you take your first offer. We save the date. If we change these terms, we will ask you to accept again.
