

Olera Student Caregiver Program Agreement

This agreement explains how the Olera program works and what you agree to when you join. It is written for you, the student. If you ever have a question about how the program works, this is the place to find the answer. Please read it before you accept your first offer.

What the program is

The program is a way to get real, paid experience caring for people, and to prove that experience so you can use it on your applications to medical, nursing, PA, and other health programs. You work for a local family or agency. You earn hours. We help you track those hours, get them verified, and turn them into a credential and a stronger application.

Olera runs the program and keeps your records. Olera does not employ you. The family or agency you work for does. More on that below.

How it works, step by step

- 1. You join. You can join if you are in school now, or if you finished school recently and plan to apply to a professional school, and you need patient-care hours. When you join, you confirm that this is true. There is nothing else you need to qualify.
- 2. You find a job and accept an offer. Your employer is who you will work for. It is either a family who needs care for a loved one, or a care agency. You browse the families and agencies near you who are looking for help, and you can talk with them before you decide. When one wants to work with you, they send you an offer. You choose the offer you want and accept it. You are never required to accept an offer.
- 3. You pay once and sign. When you accept your first offer, you pay a one-time fee of $200 and sign this agreement. This is the only fee you will ever pay. It covers the whole program, no matter how many families or agencies you work with or how many terms it takes you to finish. You only pay after a family or agency has offered you a spot and you have accepted, so you never pay for something that has not happened yet.
- 4. You get ready before your first shift. Before you start working, you complete a short training, fill out your profile, and upload any documents we ask for, such as proof of certifications. You agree to finish these before your first shift. This keeps you and the person you care for safe.
- 5. You work your shifts. You and your employer agree on your schedule and your pay. Your employer — the family or agency you work for — sets your hours, pays you, and supervises your work. If your employer is an agency, they pay you through their payroll. If your employer is a family, they pay you directly, and Olera can help send the payment. Olera does not set your pay and does not pay you.

While you work, you agree to:

- show up on time, and tell your employer early if your plans change
- only do tasks you have been trained for
- keep private what you learn about the person you care for

- keep your profile up to date, so families and agencies know when you are available and who you are working with

6. You log your hours, and your employer checks them. After each shift, you fill out a short report card. It lists the date, how long you worked, and what you did. Your employer reviews it and confirms it is correct. You agree to log your hours honestly. This step is what turns the time you worked into hours you can prove.

7. Your hours add up and stay yours. Olera keeps a running total of the hours your employers have confirmed. You can see your total at any time. Your confirmed hours belong to you. They stay yours even if you stop working with one employer or move to a new one.

If an employer does not confirm a shift right away, that shift waits as pending. At the end of your time with an employer, they confirm your full total. If there is ever a disagreement about a shift, Olera will help you and your employer work it out.

8. You finish and get your certificate. When you reach 120 confirmed hours and complete your training, Olera gives you a certificate. The certificate shows the hours you worked, and that your reviews, references, and any letters were verified. You can use it on your applications.

9. You can keep going after you finish. After the program, you are welcome to keep using Olera to work with families and agencies for as long as you want. Your application help stays free.

What you get

- families and agencies to work with near you
- confirmed patient-care hours you can prove
- reviews from your employers
- references, if an employer had a good experience with you
- a letter of recommendation, if an employer feels you earned one. Olera gives them a short summary of your work and a template to make it easy. You ask for the letter, and they decide.
- your certificate
- help with your resume, your personal statement, and a practice interview

What Olera does, and does not do

Olera does: connect you with families and agencies, keep your records and your hours, and give you your certificate and your application help.

Olera does not: employ you or pay you (your employer does), act as your insurer, or promise you a job, a certain amount of pay, a certain number of hours, or admission to any school.

A few more things to know

- When you pay: only after you accept a real offer. Never before.
- More than one employer: the $200 covers all of them. Most students start with one.

- If it does not work out with an employer: you can stop and find another. The hours you already earned stay yours.
- If we change these terms: we will tell you and ask you to accept the new version.
- Your privacy: we handle your information under our privacy policy.

Your agreement

When you click accept, you are signing this agreement. You confirm that you have read it, that you qualify to join, and that you agree to how the program works as described here. We record the date you accepted.
